You're still together... but you're apart.

That's it. The gooey romantic stuff you see on TV and the doomsaying of your friends means nothing because this is YOUR relationship.

Don't just "try" the long distance relationship. DO it. OWN it. Be so sure of its success and so committed to it that it can't help but succeed.

If you put 125% of your effort into a long distance relationship, always striving to build a stronger connection and give your partner absolutely ZERO reason to stray, then it will will work.

You'll be closer, feel more connected to your partner and spend the rest of your lives together (I certainly hope so!)

It's the simple truth and one that my friend desperately needed to hear. If you BELIEVE that this is the one, then you should have absolutely ZERO doubt in your mind that it will work.

Even a niggling worry in the back of your mind that says "she could cheat on me" is enough to keep you from trying your hardest.

So, put those worries aside. Better yet, talk about them with your partner.

Tell them what you want to do and ask that they commit as much as you well before it comes time for either of you to act.
