No Way Out: A Jack Davis Thriller (Volume 3) Mr. Joel Goldman
Staring down the barrel of a .44 - not a great way to end a day.

Some punk made off with Eldon Fowler's Ruger Redhawk .44 Magnum at the gun show. Right under his nose and he didn't even notice until the three-day show ended. It had been his favorite piece.

A man wearing his baseball cap real low on his head cruised slowly by the lot in a Dodge Ram. It made Fowler uneasy. Dealers leaving gun shows made easy targets for thieves. He knew a couple of guys who got taken for most of their inventory at other shows.

All he could do now was file a police report and insurance claim. He'd never see that gun again...but he did see it. He stared down the barrel of that .44 as the man with his cap down low fired and closed Fowler's eyes for good.

This incident sets off an avalanche of violence that leads to a firestorm of a shoot out. And that's only the beginning. As Davis delves deeper into an investigation of the murders, he becomes embroiled in a complex web of deceit that has been festering for years.

He's been in danger before during investigations. No problem. Only, this time, Davis has no idea just how deadly his involvement in this case will get. There's No Way Out.
